

Following the conclusion of the second day of the competition and the subsequent general assembly meeting, which convened on the outcomes and medal allocation, the scientific committee undertook a detailed examination of certain concerns raised by team leaders regarding the task "Spells". During this scrutiny, it was discovered that some of solutions submitted by the participants during the competition had instances where a better result than all model solutions of the scientific committee was produced. Further investigation revealed that the fundamental premise underpinning the committee's model solutions was, regrettably, flawed. In addition, it was noted that the solutions submitted by contestants during the competition were also susceptible to counterexamples. Currently, no polynomial time solution is known for the task "Spells".

In an effort to mitigate the impact of the oversight and uphold the scientific fairness of the competition to the best extent possible given the circumstances, the scientific committee suggested recalculating the standings by excluding task "Spells" and presenting them as an alternative scoreboard. The alternative scoreboard is given below.

The revised rankings of the official participants largely maintain the order in the initial standings. Only one competitor, previously awarded a silver medal, now precedes a participant who had originally received a gold medal. Following an additional resolution passed by the general assembly, this particular competitor was subsequently upgraded to a gold medal. Consequently, in alignment with the standard regulations governing unofficial participants, higher medals were also awarded to some participants, reflecting the updated awards of the official competitors. No participants saw a downgrade of the medals originally awarded to them. The following participants were upgraded to a gold medal:
